INSIDE GEORGIA FOOTBALL

...WITH LORAN SMITH

Earlier this year, it was too much on my emotions, seeing good friends depart for that Great Gridiron in the sky. It was a blow to college football aficionados to lose Pat Dye one week and soon thereafter, Johnny Majors – stunning back-to-back departures.

Life has an order which we can neither forecast nor alter which is why memories become so heartwarming. "Precious Memories, how they linger." Those lyrics resonate with any of us who sang them in church growing up or listening to a gospel music hour on the radio.

In my mind's eye, I can see John Majors in his pre-teen years, wearing short pants and singing that song at the little Methodist church in Lynchburg, Tenn., the home of the famous Jack Daniels whiskey which he did not drink. Majors was a seasoned raconteur who never forgot those days of yore when he was the hottest prep prospect in the state of Tennessee. His daddy was a high school coach who passionately underscored fundamentals of the game

In his era, games were often decided by seven points or less, which meant that the kicking game would likely be the difference. Johnny was adept at taking the snap and placing the ball at an angle where he could get the instep of his right foot square to the ball which would result in a solid kick with a tumbling effect. The ball would fly over the head of the deepest defender and roll end over end toward the opponent's goal – much like a well stuck bump and run golf shot which tracked to the hole on a subtle Scottish golf course. Johnny loved playing those shots on trips to Scotland in his prime years. It reminded him of those times when he gave his team the edge with timely quick kicks, a lost art.

If you have followed college football, especially that of the Southeastern Conference, you know about Majors and his storied high school and college career; his coaching teams to championships at Tennessee

INSIDE GEORGIA FOOTBALL

(three SEC titles) and Pittsburgh (national championship in 1976), but I will remember him for his colorful and engaging personality which connected him to interests beyond football.

Johnny loved history. He evolved from a family of teachers and was blessed with an inquiring mind and a burning curiosity. He loved the history and traditions of his home state. He also had the keenest affection for the traditions of his alma mater and ranks as one of the greatest raconteurs in history of college football. When he told a story, everybody cocked an ear. Everybody eagerly pulled up a chair.

I have seen him hold forth at coaching conventions and coaching clinics with everyone hoping the session would never break up. His stories always had a salient conclusion, but the weaving of the detail, with edifying description and insightful and colorful commentary, made him a classic story teller. People, especially football aficionados, flowed to his presence. They gravitated to his warm smile and inviting giggle which endeared him to all who came his way. John was a warm-hearted person with abundant charm.

When the National Football Foundation held its annual dinner in New York in December, it was a highlight of the year for John. He would arrange to see three, even four, Broadway shows. He never met a museum he didn't like. He was addicted to World War II history and couldn't get enough of the Normandy D-Day invasion. He gloried in touring the D-Day beaches and subsequently becoming immersed into French cooking and French wines. He played the best golf courses in Scotland and Ireland, gleaning insight and lore from the colorful caddies. John was forever "interviewing" the proletarians.

We purchased, with a couple of friends of his, the Coach-of-the-year Clinics which were founded by Bud Wilkinson of Oklahoma fame and Duffy Daugherty of Michigan State. Our paths often crossed with the major coaches such as Bill Walsh of the San Francisco 49ers. Over a two-hour lunch in San Francisco, I watched John interview the creator of the West Coast offense as if he were a fan, asking routine questions that everybody might want to ask this master coaching icon.

I arranged for us to play golf with Keith Jackson, the ABC announcer who took us to his club, the Los Angeles Country Club. The dinner conversation afterwards was akin to a ping pong match with Keith trying to keep the conversation focused on football coaches and great players of Johnny's era and John countering with inquiry regarding broadcasting history, the Olympics and how much material a broadcaster takes into a booth to call a game.

Joining us was an executive with Toyota, then our major clinic sponsor, who arranged for Keith to buy a Toyota SUV for the price attached to it when it came off the boat.

"Dinner is on me," Keith then announced in that homespun voice of his.

John was big on family and once asked if I could connect him with someone who could host him and his brothers, Joe and Bobby, for a round of golf at Augusta. I was able to do that and when I next saw him, he gave me a big bear hug. With his eyes becoming glassy, he said, "You don't know how much that meant to me. It was a highlight of my life."

John was a warm and sentimental person.

Hunting quail with John and his friend, Gene Hartman, a Knoxville businessman who maintained a warm friendship with Majors all his life, was eventful and engaging. It gave a third-party friend a seat at a table of good feelings, goodwill and ingratiating hospitality. John spent his final years, playing golf, traveling and speaking. He had more friends in coaching than any coach I have ever known. It was fitting that he died on his back patio while looking out to the beloved Tennessee River in the cool of the evening. Just right for cocktails and story-telling.

SOMETHING THAT NOT A LOT OF PEOPLE KNOW ABOUT ME IS I LIKE OLD SCHOOL R&B AND THE QUIET STORM.

MY FAVORITE SONG ON MY PREGAME PLAYLIST IS MY GOSPEL/ANITA BAKER.

CHAMPIONSHIP FLASHBACK

40-FOR-80 THE SWEETEST SEASON – OLE MISS GAME

It was back to Southeastern Conference play, and a fourth of five straight home games at beautiful Sanford Stadium, as Georgia hosted Ole Miss between the hedges. The Bulldogs came in with a record of 4-0 and carried a lofty No. 6 national ranking. This would be the second SEC game of the season. Following the famed season-opening 16-15 toppling of Tennessee in Knoxville – that's a great way to start a year, with a road conference win - the Bulldogs blew past Texas A&M of the Southwest Conference 42-0, clipped Clemson of the Atlantic Coast Conference 20-16 and took down another SWC member, Texas Christian 34-3.

In that victory over the Horned Frogs, freshman sensation Herschel Walker suffered an injured ankle on a long 41-yard run in the first quarter and did not return.

To win it all, a lot has to fall into place. First and foremost, it's essential to have tremendous players, coaches, leadership, luck with injuries and circumstance. Well, after the win over TCU, Georgia had an open date to get ready for the Rebels and have a week off without a game to help Herschel heal.
